MISCELLANY.

ODE TO MY NEW BONNET

Soft trianglo of straw and laco That curves around my blushing face With such a coy, bewitching grace No mortal man would dream your place Was on my haed.

Your airy touch can sesreely presa The shape frem curl or llowing tress, So light, as next to nothingness, You surely could not well he less And be a bonnet.

A bit of straw adorned with leather A yard of lace, a spray of heather, Some bugles and a tossing feather, These trides shaken all together— Thus you were made.

No cape with starchy nettling lined, No buckram crown projects hehind, But streamers fintter in the wind; There flows, in silken mesh confined, My water-fall.

Yet most your dainty form 1 prize, As sweeping back above mine eyes It lets the drinkled hillocks rise, Where naderneath, in amhush lies My pair of mice.

But when rough autumu winds sweep part. And all your laces shake aghast, Then can you shield me from the blast. And round my neek a shelter east To keep me warm?

Alas, a summer friend are you, And only kind while skies are blue 9,000 00 I long have known the saying true Old friends are better than the new 10,000 10,400 00 When trouble comes o ere the dog-day heats be iled Let me your flimsy glories sproad; For soon as winter whistles dread I'll tio once more about my head My old scoop bonnet.

The Arabian Girl's Revenge.

A curious story is just now occupying th cotories of the Fanbourg St. Germain. So . e three or four months since the grea

20,000 22,000 00 heart of the old Fanbourg was made to bea with a strange emotion It was rumore that the most beautiful of all its wealth 33,000 00 heiresses-the most loved, and the most courted, and the most admired-had sud denly taken the determination of entering the Convent of the Visitation, at the Barriere St. Jaques, after a severe illness brough on by some mysterions cause, which the whole of the Fanbourg, although uniting together all their curiosity, inquisitiveness and penetration, had never been able to discover. The young lady had been upon th point of marriage with a gentleman of standing aml station in society, of equal rank and fortune with herself, and of great reputa 27,000 00 tion in the scientific wordh. He had travelled much in the East. His work on Palestine is the first of its kind yet published, and altogether every excuse was made for the deep affection he had inspired. As we have said, the lover had travelled much in the East, and there were the usual stories affoat concerning the mystery of the exquisitely furnished entresol he inhabited in the Rue 20,000 22,000 00 le Verennes, into which not even his mos 20,000 17,000 00 intimate friends had ever penetratel, and whence he sometimes stirred not for weeks together. Dark insinuations were sometimes ventured upon by the over-suspicious in these matters. The mansion wherein he tiad titted up this retreat belongs to his mother, who seldom visits Paris. The garden is large and retired, and the neighbors sometimes wondered at hearing on moon ight nights a sound like that of a guitar oming up from beneath the trees, accomsanied by a weak, small voice, somewhat shrill and nasal, but evidently expressive of render. Folks are generally very trank on the subject of other people's taults, and numberless were the kind friends who insist ed on the mystery being penetrated; but the neiress, past the bloom of early youth, beg- he had loved so well. ged permission to judge for herself. The carriage, laden with the baggage, stopped beneath the gateway of the hotel where the young lady resided. At this the wretched girl seemed overcome, and she asked per-mission to embrace the lady for so much kindness. This was accorded right merrily The licitess bestowed a hearty kiss upon the stranger, which the latter returned with such isnry that a slight scream escaped her lips, and presently she laughed at her own ab surdity in having expressed pain at the lit-tle scratch which had been made upon her cheek by one of the spiked gold ornaments of the oriental headdress worn by the stran-ger. A ROMAN HERO.

In the war between Rome and Carthage, the Consul Regulus was taken captive. He was kept a close prisoner for two years, pining and sinkening in his loneliness, while in the meantime the war continued, and at last victory so decisive was gained by the Ro mans, that the people of Carthage were dis-couraged, and resolved to ask terms of peace They thought that no one would be so read ly listened to at Rome as Regulus, and the herefore sent him there with their envoys having first made him swear that he would come back to his prison if there should nei They little knew how much more a true hearted Roman cared for his city than him

Then be spoke. He told the Senators to persevere in the war. He said that he had een the distress of Carthage, and that a peace would be only to her advantage, not to that of Rome, and therefore he strongly advised that the war should continue as to the exphange of prisoner, the Cartha ginian Generals, who were in the hamls of mind, understanding all things, and there-fore capable of forgiveness in all cases. A Good Old Minister.

Dr. John Brown in his charming "Spare Hours," gives a pleasant sketch of an uncle one of the abstracted, kindhearted minis. ters, great in his profession, but ill-versed in the ways of the world. One of his adventures is exquisitely told:

Uncle Ebenezer, with all his milducss and general complaisance, was, like most of the Browns, firm to obstinacy. He had estabished a weekly-day sermon at the North Ferry, about two miles from his own town Inverkeithing. It was winter, and a wild, drifting, and a dangerous day; his daughters-his wife was dead-hesonght him not to go; he smiled vaguely, but continued get-ting into his great coat. Nothing would stay him, and away he and the popy stum-bled through the dumb and blinding snow.

He was half-way on his journey, and ing, the heirers, superb and generous in all had got into the sermon he was going to things, drew the poor forlorn stranger to her bosom, aml placed round her neck a chain of considerable value. At this the wretchmaster and himsell into the ditch at the roadside. The feeble, heedless, wrapt old man might have perished there, had not some carters bringing up casks of whiskey from the ferry seen the catastrophe, and rushed up, raising him, and ditchin' him, with much commiseration and blunt speech: "Puir aubl man, what brocht ye here in sic

There they were, a rough crew, surrounding the saintly man, some putting on his hat, sorting and cheering him, and others knocking the balls off the pony's feet and stuffing them with grease. He was most po the single drop of blood which had followed the wound' Soon after, as we have already said, the lady was pronounced to be suffer-'ll hearten ye." He took the horn, and admitted near her; the doctors were power-less, the malady grew worse, and finally it was declared that the patient had retired to drift and storm, with these wild lellows, he the Visitation, where the ladies possess a asked a blessing on it, and for his kind decertain remedy for cancer. But from the liverers, and took a tasting of the horn.convent she never meant to remove Not long ago she became a member of the sis terhood, and lo! at the banquet given on when the rest arrived in Inverkeithing, they Sunday last, she was the only one whose repeated the story to every body and broke veil was never lifted! Italy.

There has never been a good understanding between the government of Pius IX. and that of Victor Emanuel. From the time when the king, soon after his accession to the throne, secularized the property of the church, and took from the clergy the all ages, could not furnish the required stimexclusive control of education, the pope has ulus. not ceased to regard him as an enemy of religion, and of the Roman Catholic church. Though it is more than ten years since Victor Emanuel was excommunicated for these first encroachments upon the ecclesiastical prerogatives of Rome, the subsequent events of Italian history have tended to deepen, rather than to assuage, the feeling then excited in the bosom of his holi-The formation of the kingdom of Italy, including not only Lombardy, but Tuscany, Naples, and even the greater portion of the states of the church, and the consciousness that, whatever be the declared purpose of the Italian government, the ardent desire of the people is that Rome should be occupied and proclaimed as the capital of the new power, have only the more exasperated the pontifical authorities Nor is the character of the crisis the least mitigated in their eyes by the fact that their there in any manner, except by the sufferauce of the prince they abominate, is due to the presence of a French army under the orders of Napoleon, whom they distrust and Nevertheless, it is no secret that negotiations have for several months been going on between the cabinet of Turin and the cabinet of the Vatican, and the hopes of the more moderate liberals of Europe have been perialists. He raised an insurrection against much animated by the apparent possibility of a reconciliation. The starting point of the undertaking appears to have been found in the fact that seventy Italian bishoprics are vacant. These cannot be filled withou the consent of both the government of Italy and the papal see. The vacancy of so great a number of important ecclesiastical dignities is the cause of much inconvenience both at Fiorence and at Rome. Our readers can clearly understand that it is no trille in a country like Italy that all episcopal functions are suspended in sevenly extensive and populous districts. The people suffer and murmur at the privation; and the interests of neither kingdom or papacy are subserved; though probably of the two the papacy is the greater sufferer.

The initiative in the attempt at a settlement is said to have proceeded from the without special ceremony, to Victor Eurannel, requesting him to send a confidential envoy to Rome The Commander Vegezzi was selected and sent accordingly, and communications have been constant between him and Cardinal Antonelli. The Italian government has, we believe, proposed to guarantee to the papal see the secure posession of the city of Rome and its immedi ate dependencies; to protect the independ ence of the pope; and to furnish to his ho liness, in consideration of recognition of the kingdom of Italy, the formal reuunciation of every claim to the former provinces of the church which now constitute a portion of the kingdom, and the withdrawal of all conntenance to the king of Naples or other pretenders, an annual revenue that shall be an ample equivalent for all that the pope is asked to concede. Along with this proposal, Vegezzi offered to negotiate a concordat regulating the appointment of Italian bish ops, whereby the king should nominate and the pope confirm them.

The papal see has, we believe, shown throughout the transactions, a steady disposition to yield none of the important points required by Victor Emanuel. The pope was especially unwilling to renounce the title to the lost provinces. In fact, he would consent to little else except an arrangement respecting the bishoprics. Accordingly, the attempt has resulted in nothing except to prove that it is not now possible for the two governments to arrive at an agreement.

It has been alleged that the French emperor has threatened to withdraw his troops from Rome in the event of this failure, but we presume they will remain there. We do Pins IX. but justice, however, when we say that his decisions are not formed from re gard to their external consequences. He would refuse the offers of Victor Emanuel with equal firmness, whether their refusal would lose him the possession of Rome or not - Chicago Republican.

The Late Rebellion, and the Lack of True Inspiration in Those who Re-

The complete ending of the rebellion con-tinues to puzzle those European publicists, who had so long ago determined the issue the conflict by the logic of history, and invincible array of precedents. It is yet all but impossible for them to realize the fact that a territory of so vast extent. of such exhaustless resources, with such varie y in surface and geographical character such strength of strategic position, fertility in supplies, facilities of intercommunica tion, numbering so large a population, oc capied by a people possessing an extraordi nary military and aristocratic basis of po litical institutions, on which the whole framework of society rested, could be re duced to submission by any possible for-tune of war. The trouble with these foreign diviners was their failure to see that we were making, instead of following history, and ereating, instead of accepting precedents.

Yet, it is doubtless true, that a large body of the people of the Southern States believe ed they could be free from the Union, i they would, and appealed, like their Europ ean advocates, for the sustenance of their faith to history and internal conviction. I was this persuasion which drove such civilians as Stephens and such soldiers as Johnston into the war, and filled really able Southern journalism with invectives against the "tolly and madness" of the North, in dreaming she could coerce seven millions of brave people into obedience to the National Sovernment. The same faith found sufficient root here to disturb us in the North for a time. But the result was that it made the government—in time—watchful and so-ber, as well as resolute, and toned popular excitement down to stern patriotic devotion although we had to cucounter all the while the timid and selfish among that class o our people who raised a periodical cry for an armistice, and peace at any price. The secret of our strength in defiance of all the discouraging arguments offered to prove that we should fail, lay in the fact that the great body of the American people believed that the South lacked a good cause for which to fight. An army may battle for its flag alone, but a nation must have a principle at stake. It was precisely because the South had no tyranny to be free from, that she never could get to the point of voluntary self-sacrifice, stubborn as was her resistance for the time, which might have assured her freedom. To bring out such virtuous immolation to principle, the principle must be worth the offering. An institution re puguant to the spirit of progress and of the age, an institution offensive to humanity in The project to found a new republic, as Mr. Stephens said, with slavery as a corner stone, did not yield a motive ample enough. Nor did the scheme to tear asunder our glorions Union—to gratify the vanity, passion and ambition of a privileged class-suffice. When the tyranny, covetousness and sellishness of the rebel leaders at length came to be exposed, in the progress of the war, the halo which surrounded the personal figures of their chiefs failed to attract the Southern people; and the rebellion, losing "the motive and the cue for passion" which it started with, fell through even more rapidly than it broke upon the Old Santa Anna, if the report is not a fabrication, is out against Maximilian, and an empire in Mexico, and wants the people to tennre of Rome, and their freedom to act rally in favor of democracy. Santa Anna is in his element when he is stirring up political revolution, but his history will not inspire much confidence in his new-born zeal for democracy. Students at the United States naval acalemies are not permitted to marry, but some time since, before the naval school was re-moved from Annapolis, an amorous cadet unwilling to defer his happiness till the receirt of his commission, ventured upon private marriage with a young beauty of the place. Nothing remained but to keep the secret. Extensive Silk and Wine Growing Proposition.

A proposition has been made to the Agricultural Bureau by Attilia Valtellina, of Lombardy, Italy, to colonize eighty-two Italians in the State of New York or New Jersey, for the purpose of raising silks and wines. The proposer agrees to furnish one million grapevines and ten thousand mulberry trees, and will transport the laborers to this country for $40,000, one-half to be expended in the purchase of vines, trees, alk worms, implements and other expenses. He says he has a perfect knowledge of the business, and that such a farm or plantation could be put in operation in three or four months. The first two years the production would be nominal, but the third it would pay a profit, and the fifth year he estimates the production at the enormous figure of $$00,-000.000

He says the climate of the States named well adapted to the culture of wine and silks, and it only needs experienced workmen to develope the capabilities of the soil, which will render us entirely independent of foreign nations for wines and silks, which can be produced in this country as plentifully and as cheaply as in Italy. He refers to Hon. Geo. C. Marsh American, Consul at Turin, as a guarantor of his ability to per form what he proposes. The Agricultural Bureau having no authority to engage in en-terprises of this kind, cannot cutertain the proposition, but it is a matter well worthy the attention of capitalists.

J. C. Breckinridge on Crnelty,

There are few of us who have forgotten that famous, or rather that infamous adess of John C. Breckinridge, when, having safely skedaddled into the Confederate lines, he denounced President Lincoln in pitter and almost beastly language, and deailed what things were not to be done while the gallant sons of Kentucky could 'make that State sing to the music of their

Allowance may be made for the exagge ated feelings which called forth such diaribes four years ago, as we know how many men there are whose former denunciation of the North are now only a source of shame and vexation to themselves. But the !times are altered. Men front to front on the field mutual respect, and the ac cusations of the most violent become tempered by the stern logic of war. And, there fore, it is surprising that a man, even of the bad experience of John C. Breckinridge reckiess as we know him to be, should no at this hour have begun to perceive that the time has come for perfect truthfulness in stating the questions which brought on the war, and the questions to be settled, now that it is over. Mr. Breckinridge writes from Cuba whence, it is to be presumed, he wishes to return. As a preliminary to this return he does what? Act like a man beat en in fair fight and willing to own it? Not at all. He indulges in much the same talk as he used four years ago, and has the assurance to cantion the government that there can be no lasting peace founded upon

The Southern Press.

We receive exchanges from North Carolina, Virginia, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana, and read them with considerable interest. As a general thing, they profess to regard the result of the war as a rerdict against secession and slavery, and advise the people to so recognize and abide for this wretch to vent upon the helple by it. The greater portion of them seem to prisoners in his power, and that the tortur e honest and sincere. There are more indications of smouldering disloyalty in the State of Virginia, than in the press of any other State. The loss of the great source of revenue, slavery, goes extremely hard with the representatives of Virginia sentiment, more so than we would have expected. Occasionally in other States some newspaper betrays a latent spirit of rebellion, when the subject of slavery is mentioned, as did the Clarksville (Texas) Standard, when, in pubishing certain general orders of Gen. Granger, it said: "Our citizens will perceive, the negroes are declared free. This declaration certainly does not legally free the negroes. It is a process of emancipation unknown to the Constitution, and without legitimate effect." But these instances are rare, and must not be accepted as reflections of the najority, who are wise enough to know that slavery is at an end, and that they must accommodate themselves to the changed relations of the negro and the white man. On the whole, so far as we can judge of the temper of the Southern people, we regard it as extremely encouraging. The press, at any rate, is disposed to do its duty, and we feel confident the people are or will be with them.

A correspondent, writing from Richiond relates an incident, as follows:

"Talking of oaths reminds me of a local oke, which my pen cannot resist recording. A modest young country girl, on applying or rations to one of our reliel agents, a few days ago, was asked if she had ever taken the oath. 'No, indeed,' was her terrified reply, 'I never swore in all my life.' must take the oath, my good girl,' said the agent, 'or I cannot give you the rations.' No, indeed, I can't, sir,' said the girl mother always taught me never to swear. Review of News.

The laying of the Atlantic Telegraph eable is the great object of interest at present. On the morning of the 28th ult., the Great Eastern had paid ont 500 miles of the cable with much success. The siguals continued good and the weather was five. The arrival of the Great Eastern at Heart's Content, Newfoundland, is expected hourly. Great doubt exists as to the successful working of the cable for any length of time even if it is successfully laid and remains first Monday of September next as the day for election of delegates to a State Conventhat month. The purpose of the Convention is "the altering or amending the present Con stitution of South Carolina, or remodeling or making a new one, which will conform to the great changes that have taken place in that State, and be more in accordance with republican principles, as to equality of representation.

The rebel General Wade Hampton has emigration of Southerners to foreign countries and recommending all who can do so to take the oath of allegiance.

The war against the Indians is to be pressed with great determination. General Dodge left Fort Leavenworth on the 3d inst., for Forts Kearney and Laramie. He is confident, with the forces now under his command, of patting a stop to Indian hostilities on the plains. The number of Indians now upon the war-path is very large.

The Philadelphia American says a proposition has been made to the Southern planters by English enpitalists to supply the Southern people with goods, giving credit until the gathering of the crops, and taking produce in payment.

Merritt's Cavalry have arrived at Austin, Texas. The United States flag now floats over the Capitol of that State.

The English Election returns are complete. The result is the election of 367 Liberals and 290 Conservatives. The net Liberal gain is 27, The collection of Internal Revenue in the Third District of Kentucky, (Louisville)

Reports of French success are said to be unfound-

President Johnson has pardoned Bishop Lynch, of South Carolina. The Bishop is at Rome at the present time. A lady of New Orleans, whose propertyhad been confiscated, has also been pardoned and her property r stored at the instance of Gen. Butler.

A treaty has just been formed among the leading South American States, providing for the common defense against foreign intervention in the affairs of either, each binding itself to non-intercourse with any nation attacking either. This treaty is intended to counteract the machinations of Napoleon and Maximilian, and is to be binding for fitteen

Gen. Sheridan has been ordered to muster ont of service all volunteer troops in the Department of Texas that he thinks he can dispense with. Preference will be given to veteran regiments having the shortest time

The commander of the Department of Texas has been re-instructed to abstain from any intervention in the war between France and the republic of Mexico

It is stated that the Secretary of the Treasnry has more than enough money on hand to pay every dollar due the soldiers. Five millions will be sent out by the next steamer for New Orleans to pay the Texas troops. Capt. Drayton, Chief of the Bureau of Navigation, died in Washington on Priday last. He participated with Admiral Dupont in the taking of Port Royal and other important places Capt. Drnyton was a South Carolinian.

The Chili Congress has been for a fortnight considering Article 5 of their Constitution, which makes the Roman Catholic the religion of the Republic, to the exclusion of the public exercise of any other.

ENCOURAGING NEWS FROM THE INTERIOR. Here I niet an intelligent and communicative citizen of Florida, from whom I obtained many items of interest. It is generally supposed that Florida has suffered much more than she actually has, but the fact is the interior of the State to a considerable extent remains uninjured. The Union forces did much damage at Baldwin, but with almost this single exception the destruction of property sustained by Florida during the war is chiefly confined to her sea coast cities villages and towns, which, after all, leave her people in a much more healthy and desirable condition than is generally suppos

THE SUGAR CROP.—The supply and price of sugar, says the Washington Republican, political calculation give the following as the probable results of the Congressional alon ed. It is an indispensable article of domestic comfort, and naturally, when scarce and high, excites anxiety as to its future abundance and consequent cheapness. gratifying to the consumer to know that the production of the article is rapidly on the increase. Formerly, Louisiaua was able to throw into market in a single season nearly four hundred and fifty thousand hogsheads of sugar, hut the war has greatly crippled her saechariue resources, and last year she only furnished about eleven thousand hogsheads. It is gratifying to know that the crop this year is estimated at thirty thousand hogsheads. When the State is well vorked up again under the foster influence of peace, and a free and properly compensated industry, she will once more yield her abundance, and furnish a liberal supply of this indispensable article. Until we reach that point, which will require time, we must bear with high prices and the inconveniences of a short supply.
